

Governor Little celebrates Adult Education and Literacy Week

Idaho Governor Brad Little proclaimed Sept. 19-23, 2022, Adult Education and Family Literacy Week in Idaho. The recognition, which is part of a larger effort to increase awareness of and advocate for adult education in Idaho, was spearheaded by Trevi Hardy, who serves as the College of Western Idaho's (CWI) English as a Second Language (ESL) and Career Pathways supervisor.

"There is a lot of great work happening across the state in adult education, but it is a small piece of the education landscape in Idaho," said Hardy. "We have about 5,000 students in adult education across the state of Idaho. We do so much work which isn't always recognized. I was very excited the governor would elevate that work."

Hardy, who also serves as the Idaho State Advocate for Adult Education fellowship, was joined by CWI student Asel Orozaly and ESL teacher Edvin Subasic and the Idaho Division of Career Technical Education for the signing on Sept. 19. Orozaly graduated from CWI's ESL program and earned a Swift Programming certificate. Subasic teaches Adult Education and helped create the curriculum for the ESL pilot program, Bridge to English 101.

"I'm so happy we got to share the stories of the teachers who work in the program and the students who accomplish so much," Hardy said. "This week is an opportunity to continue elevating these stories and spread the good work the team of Adult Education in Idaho is doing."
